

I strongly object to the following:

The FCC is considering preempting state Telephone Privacy laws in favor of adopting one lower national standard.

Each state should be allowed to adopt their own laws for this, it has been a very welcomed is Indiana homes and would honestly irritate many residents to go back to the bothersome calls constantly. Please do not lower the standard, even children benefit from this change in our home now. I do not have to worry that they are home alone and do not answer because they do not want to talk to strangers. Please consider the effort that this state and other states have gone through to adopt this popular means to stop the annoying calls into our homes. I use to get at least 4 per night and now I don't get any. I was angered by each and very one, and got to the point I'd just tell them I was the sitter and the parents they wanted were not home to "get rid of them". How many of us teach our children to lie just to avoid these bothersome calls. I did and I'm a pretty honest person! But they wouldn't leave me alone no matter how many times you ask them to take you off of their lists, another list appears and a new business buys it and calls.....it is an ugly endless cycle that was stoped by the Indiana Telephone Privacy laws and I for one do not wish to go back to several calls per night or any calls of that sort again. family and friends.
